

Agriculture uses 80% of the water and they get it far cheaper than urban users. They must make the same level of sacrifices and regulations must address inefficient water use in agriculture.

The enhanced regulations for both urban and agriculture must be announced jointly.

The biggest users grow largely for export and although they are wealthy, the net contribution of their product to the state GDP is very small.

Gail Sredanovic
2161 Ashton Av.
Menlo Park