Subject: RE: Toxic stuff

Inorganic arsenic oxides are on the Prop. 65 list of developmental toxins, so it is safe to put arsenic on your list. Several PAHs are on the Prop. 65 list as cancer-causing, but not for developmental toxicity. The attached ATSDR profile of PAHs contains summaries of animal studies that show developmental toxicity of PAHs to animals (look at the section on oral toxicity, not inhalation, if you want to check it out). There isn't good human evidence. So I think it would be safer to say that evidence from animal studies suggests that PAHs may be developmental toxins in humans.

PAH health effects
from ATSDR....

Hi

Is it OK to put PAH and arsenic in a list of chemicals that are a danger to a developing embryo?
